

Barn Related Contractors and Consultants

As the old saying goes, you don't need to reinvent the wheel when rehabilitating or repairing your barn. There are folks with the technical expertise and hands-on experience to assist you and who are willing to do the work for you, no matter how small the project. Because there are a variety of approaches to rehabilitating barns, you are encouraged to talk to different contractors, architects, and engineers when planning your rehabilitation project.

The following contractors have told us they have the experience in various aspects of old barn and farm building restoration, rehabilitation, renovation, and adaptive use. In providing the following list, no endorsement is expressed or intended and none should be implied. You should consider which consultant is the best qualified, competent, and capable of undertaking your barn rehabilitation project.

In choosing a contractor or consultant, consider qualifications, experience, and capabilities. Look for qualifications appropriate to the needs of your project and demonstrated relevant performance for previous clients. Always check references. A contractor should have a permanent address, a working phone number, a tax ID number, a certificate of insurance and bonding information (see www.bbb.org). Evaluate each proposal to ensure that the person or firm is qualified for, understands, and can complete the job. Finally, compare acceptable proposals and select the one offering the best proposal for the best price.
